DESCRIPTION

(Silvia Fasana)

The Shrine of S. Miro al Monte is a small stone building, with a simple gable façade preceded by a recently rebuilt portico with three arches. There is a head and shoulders figure of St. Miro with his arms open in the lunette of the entrance portal, accompanied by the words «And you shall have water», in remembrance of the last words he said in Canzo before leaving for Upper Lake Como, where he died. The interior is simple and secluded: on the main altar stands a seventeenth century altarpiece depicting the Madonna and Child with St. Miro (left) and St. Roch (right), surrounded by a rich stucco decoration with caryatids at the sides. The walls are frescoed with great Scenes from the life of St. Miro, painted by the artist Albertazzi in the 50s of the last century.

The Shrine was built starting in 1643 on the site where tradition has it that the hermitage of St. Miro Paredi once stood. The building, funded by donations of local devotees of the Saint, could be completed only in 1660. Beside the church you can see a small two-storey building, home to a number of monks probably connected to the nearby monastery of S. Francesco, until it was suppressed at the end of the eighteenth century. The monks cultivated medicinal plants on small mounds, which are still visible, made with dry stone walls on the opposite side of the Ravella stream (“Giardin di Fraà”, i.e. “The Garden of the Brothers”). From the second half of the 19th century the structure was left in a state of disrepair; in the following century restoration and conservative adaptation works were carried out on a number of occasions.
